These birds have been in quarantine from December 2016 until the sale dates due to the Rota Virus outbreak. My decision was to protect the birds from any harm. In doing so and the length of time to vaccinate against the Rota Virus I have made my race team redundant. My wife and I have been planning for a few years a change of scenery with retirement looming next year, so I need to clear the decks in our preparation for a probable move.

These bloodlines have been developed by some of the best flyers on the East Coast of Australia and will add value I am sure.

As well as another 30 or more club and federation prizes taken.

In the 2016 race season this cock sired 40% of the 40 stock pigeons kept (20 pairs).

Apart from the prize-winning ability this family has crossed with the other families in this catalogue, another impressive trait they have is having the ability to survive Falcon attacks & difficult tossing while in early education.

One early morning toss at 8.00am from 40km, their ninth toss, the fog rolled in after liberation & the first mob home was 12.30pm & by end of day 95 from 100 home. I have had other race teams in the past that I could lose up to 30% to 50% on the day under those conditions.

Around my loft the birds are under constant falcon attacks. I have had birds spend the night out but often they are back the next day or two. I believe this type of race pigeon gives you the opportunity to have extra birds on the perches to select from for the middle to longer distance races to help you compete throughout the full race season.
